

1.1 Getting Started – Welcome

Welcome to our “Evidencing Impact through Engagement” online course. This is the third in a four-course pathway to learning how to ‘Identify, Evidence and Narrate Research Impact’. This course will cover the basics of evidence gathering and stakeholder engagement and will go into more depth around the different ways of gathering evidence and feedback.

This course consists of 5 sections and each of the sections is made up of several lessons. A lesson will usually include a video, a written post and any other relevant materials like a further reading list or an exercise. In the final section, you will also be given a quiz in order to test what you have learned.

Every time you finish a section, make sure you press the ‘Mark Complete’ button at the bottom of the page as this will mark your progress throughout the course. You’ll see that every time you finish a lesson, the progress bar on the right side will increase, so you can track how far along in the course you are.

As many others have previously and will be in the future going through this course, feel free to contribute any thoughts on the lessons in the comment section below each lesson. In this way, we hope we can build up a knowledge base and that you have an opportunity to reflect as well as learn from each other.

Now let’s get started! Have fun and good luck.
